

Group 3 – Desk review by editor

Results <https://www.science.org/content/article/what-massive-database-retracted-papers-reveals-about-science-publishing-s-death-penalty>

Reduced costs:

Automation of routine checks and tasks reduces the need for extensive manual labor, resulting in cost savings. Expenses. Prediction on the step page reviewing.

Improved performance:

The AI system's ability to analyze large volumes of data and identify patterns improves the overall performance of the desk review process.

Better decision-making:

AI can recommend keywords to the author
AI can detect patterns that are likely to be AI generated

Higher customer satisfaction:

AI can help with choosing the right journal based on criteria

Better customer segmentation:

The AI system can analyze patterns and indicators within papers, aiding in the identification of potential ethical issues in papers. Adapt to recent literature.

Improved customer experience:

Automation of routine checks speeds up the publication process, reducing waiting times and providing a smoother and more efficient experience for authors.

Better products & services:

AI can create a form of the better review report.
If the paper is rejected because of quality on the stage 7 based on the prediction, then the paper might become better

Business innovation: